

Part II: The Edible Loop

Approximately .5 miles/30-45 minutes

From the Warehouse Art Gallery, 15 Campbell St., Luray.

The Warehouse Art Gallery, formerly Luray Supply Company b. 1910, is the home of many works of art by local and regional artists. After browsing the gallery, go out the doors and turn right, turn right onto Campbell St. and walk down to “Tribute to a Champion Tree” by Chris Anderson in the E. Main St. parking lot. A few steps farther and to the right is “Norfolk and Western Train Station 1940s” by Jennifer Bradt. This depot was restored and now houses the Luray-Page County Chamber of Commerce, the Visitor’s Center and the Page County RR Club’s HO gauge model railroad and museum.

Walk out toward Main St. and to the left is Stephen’s Sugar Shack. Inside is a wall mural of a tropical island by Barbara Jennings, Tina Kibler and students of S&N Music & Art.

Leaving the Sugar Shack, proceed right on Main St. and as you pass Uncle Buck’s Restaurant look over your shoulder at “Singing Tower” by John Graves. Cross the street before the RR tracks, walk up Tannery Rd. and you’ll spy another mural by Jennifer Bradt on the side of Turner’s Auto Body. On the corner of E. Main St. and Tannery Rd. is Slye Pocket Park. Tucked inside this shady spot is “Virginia” by Weldon Bagwell.

On this side of the street you will get another view of “Singing Tower” by John Graves.

The next stop is Gathering Grounds Patisserie & Café. Inside you will find “Town of Luray Landscape” by Jennifer Bradt.

Leaving Gathering Grounds continue to the right on E. Main St., walking toward the traffic signal at Broad St. Turn right at this corner onto N. Broad St. and you will see the mural “Ford” by Jennifer Bradt. This was the Ford Motor Co. building and is now occupied by Aramark. Across the street is “Skyline Drive” by Steven Jesse.

Return to Main Street and cross to the Artisans Grill. “Blue Canoe on the Shenandoah” by Wes & Eileen Porter is located inside. Next door is Arts & Artisans Fine Art Gallery, owned by Wes Porter, and open Wednesday to Sunday 12:00 to 5:00 pm.

When you leave the Arts & Artisans Fine Art Gallery, turn right onto E. Main St. and continue back to Stephen’s Sugar Shack. The sign will direct you back to the Warehouse Art Gallery.

OR, to continue on to Part III you can either walk by turning left onto E. Main St when you leave the Arts & Artisans Fine Art Gallery, cross Broad St., pass Ruffner Plaza and arrive at Main St. and Hawksbill St., or you can return to the Warehouse Art Gallery and drive west on Main St, turn right onto Hawksbill St. and park in the public parking lot adjacent to N. Hawksbill St.
